THE FARM AND TURF.

News For the Farmer, Trader and Stock Raiser.

The Breeders' Gazette says that times were never brighter for breeders of saddle horses.

G. W. Wilder, yardmaster of the L. & N., of this city, threshed 275 bushels of wheat Tuesday off of eight acres of his farm, near this city.

Sixty of the leading farmers of Marion county have organized to get better prices for their wheat.

The Assessors' reports for the year 1899, just tabulated by the State Board of Equalization, give the following totals: Tobacco, 229,703 acres gave a yield of 146,052,926 pounds, or 634,8 per acre; hemp, 4,832,188 pounds; corn, 1,925,257 acres, yield 25,331,536 bushels, per acre; wheat, 888,961 acres, yield 8,181,441 bushels, or 9.2 bushels per acre; meadows, 149,063 acres yield 384,567 tons, or 1.5 tons per acre; grass and clover seed, 133,905 bushels.

Dr. Catlett, a race horse formerly owned by Turney Bros., of this city, has developed into quite a jumper. He has won a number of hurdle races, his last win being the Independence Steeplechase at Sheephead Bay, on the Fourth. L. Joseph, the cattle buyer, has made the first shipment of the season of export cattle from Paris. He shipped seven cars, bought from Chas. A. Meng and C. C. Clarke.

EXCELLENT bath service at Crawford Bros.' barber shop at all hours. Polite attendance.

There is a report at Frankfort that Gov. Beckham will order special elections soon in the four legislative districts where vacancies exist on account of the death of four Democratic members of the General Assembly. This leads to the belief that the Governor will call an extra session of the Legislature this fall.

Klaw & Erlanger will star Jerome Sykes next season in "Foxy Quiller," a new opera by Smith and De Koven. There will be 150 people and 350 costumes in the opera.

MESSRS. T. H. CLAY, JR., C. R. James and E. T. Shipp, of this city, attended the Fourth of July shoot given by the Kentucky Gun Club at Louisville, and made excellent scores. In a team shoot at live birds, Clay scored 21, James 16 and Shipp 19. Jake Gay, of Pine Grove, was defeated for the State Championship, by Harry Lyons, of Louisville. The match was at fifty live birds and the following high scores were made: Lyons 46, Gay 45, Clay 43, Shipp 34. During the shoot 5,000 live birds were trapped.

WERE BLOWN TO ATOMS

Five Men Killed by the Explosion of a Burning Oil Tank.

One of the Most Disastrous Accidents in the History of the Ohio River Railroad Occurred at Parkersburg, W. Va.

Parkersburg, W. Va., July 5.—The most disastrous accident in the history of the Ohio River railroad occurred near the shops of that road at 7:21 o'clock Wednesday morning. The terrible loss of life and injury to person was caused by the explosion of a burning car which had contained 6,000 gallons of oil, but had been burning for several hours. About 3:35 o'clock a switch on which the oil car and several other cars had been placed was left open and the south-bound freight No. 35 ran into the open switch and set fire to the car. The front end of the engine knocked in the end of the tank, from which the oil caught fire. The oil burned slowly, as the hole was only a small one, and at 7 o'clock it was still burning. The officials who met their untimely death a few minutes later were near the car superintending the removal of the wreckage and the clearing of the track, when suddenly the whole tank exploded. Gas had formed in the inside of the big tank, and when the fire reached it there was a terrific explosion. The larger portion of the car was blown about 100 yards down the track. The dome of the car was blown nearly 200 yards.

At the time the explosion occurred there were 100 or more persons standing around in close proximity of the burning car, watching the flames and the work of clearing the track. Many of the crowd who were standing near the car when it blew up were deluged with the falling oil, but were not seriously injured. The officials and workmen of the road who were killed were blown down the track nearly 50 yards and must have been instantly killed by the terrible force of the explosion. They were standing right where the explosion occurred and received the full force of it. Some of the men who were killed were blown out into the cornfield and it was some time before their bodies were found. The killed were all frightfully mangled. Their death was evidently from the force of the explosion and not from the burning oil, although some of them showed evidences of having been burned. Small fragments of human bodies were picked up around the scene of the explosion and some charred fragments of bodies which had evidently been blown off and then burned.

The dead are:
J. H. Hamilton, general superintendent of the Ohio River railroad.
E. La Lime, master mechanic.
Chas. Mohler, yard master.
G. O. Shannon, known as "Dick," extra train dispatcher.
Bradley Reeves, freight brakeman.
Geo. Chalk, a fireman, died about noon at St. Luke's hospital.
Those most seriously injured are:
Jim Ruth, fireman, will die.
Will Carr, jr., engineer.
P. B. Dickson, fireman.
John Ruth, fireman.
Chas. Smith, fireman.
J. C. Chevront, yard engineer.
T. J. Stafford, night yard master.
Jim Raymond, day yard conductor.
E. D. Kelley, yard brakeman.
Geo. Huff, fireman.
Geo. Coleman, roundhouse foreman.
E. T. Hull, wrecking foreman.
Geo. Bradford, fireman, hands and face burned; not dangerous.

About 40 others, men, women and children, were slightly injured, some burned, some hurt by the explosion. The coroner's jury, which was impaneled by Coroner Keever at 10 o'clock, found the following verdict: "The death of the before mentioned parties was caused by the explosion of an oil tank in the yards of the Ohio River Railroad Co., about 7:30 o'clock, July 4, 1900. Said tank supposed to contain refined oil shipped from the Standard Oil Co., of this city. We further find that the said oil tank was set on fire by the engine of freight train No. 35, south bound, colliding with north end of said tank, on the main track of said railroad. We further find that the accident was caused by the night yard crew being asleep while on duty."

An Attempt to Defraud.

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 5.—C. A. Taylor, of this city, believes an attempt was made recently to defraud him through a letter received by him from Spain. He was told that a beautiful young girl with a large estate had been placed in a priest's hands to be delivered to Mr. Taylor in accordance with a correspondence between Mr. Taylor and a man in Spain he never knew. The man died and the girl was on her way to America. Her baggage, the priest's letter says, was seized, but $850 would release it and secure the title papers to the estate. Authorities in Spain are looking into the case.

Cholera Raging in Bombay.

London, July 5.—A dispatch to the Express from Bombay says that in all except three districts cholera is raging in the Bombay presidency. The cases reported for the week ended June 26 number 20,689 and the deaths 12,333.

Cyclone in Germany.

Berlin, July 5.—The town of Recklinhausen, in Westphalia, and vicinity suffered great damage as the result of a cyclone. A number of persons were buried under the ruins of their houses. Several of these are dead.

APPALLING ACCIDENT.

Thirty-Six Persons Are Crushed to Death and Over Fifty Others Badly Hurt.

Tacoma, Wash., July 5.—Nearly a hundred people, passengers on a street car bound for this city, were plunged down a gulch at 26th and C streets shortly after 8 o'clock Wednesday morning. Those who were standing on the platform dropped off, only to be bruised and wounded by the heavy body of the coach, while others in the car were killed and maimed before they knew what had happened. The car jumped the track and was immediately smashed to kindling wood in the bottom of the chasm, over 100 feet below. The dead will number nearly three score, for there are many of the injured who will never recover, and who are expected to die at any moment, and there are at least 60 of the passengers of the car now in the various hospitals and under the care of their own physicians.

It was one of the most appalling accidents that has ever occurred in this city, and it came at a time when it was least expected. Residents of the near-by towns—Edison, Lakeview, Parkland, Lake Park and other places—were coming to Tacoma to spend the Fourth. Their journey was nearly at an end when they met death in horrible form. Crushed, maimed and mangled, the unfortunates were dragged from beneath the wreck of the car and tender hands ministered to them until conveyances could be had to carry them to hospitals and to the homes of their friends. The dead were laid on the grass, but there were few in the crowds of spectators and rescuers who gathered at the scene at that time who knew who was dead and living.

FIREWORKS EXPLODED.

Four Children Killed, Three Fatally Injured and About Twenty Others Hurt.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 5.—A blank cartridge fired at close range by a small-colored boy into a large collection of fireworks of a highly explosive character cost the lives of four children, the probable death of three others and severe burns to 20 others, only two of whom were adults.

The dead are: Carmel Diango, aged 11 years; Charles Feruzzi, aged 11, and two unidentified children.

Those who will probably die are: Isabelle De Lites, aged 8 years; Jennie Dianno, aged 3, and Frank Nacitro, aged 9 years.

The explosion occurred in front of a small shop on Eighth street in the most thickly populated district. The fireworks were on a stand on the pavement and consisted largely of giant firecrackers, torpedoes, rockets and chasers. A crowd of children was clustered about the stand. The colored boy, Isaiah Harris, pointed the pistol in the direction of the fireworks and fired. The force of the explosion which followed shattered the windows of many stores and residences in the vicinity, and the scene was covered by a dense smoke. When this lifted the forms of more than a score of children were found lying on the street, burned and bleeding. The owners of the fireworks were arrested.

Three Men Killed and One Injured.

Seranton, Pa., July 5.—Three men were killed and one man had a leg broken by a wreck on the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad at Durham's cut, near Henryville, Pa. The dead are: Harry Goglier, fireman; George Davis, brakeman, and Edward Ryan, brakeman, all of Seranton. The injured man is Conductor Cunningham, of Stroudsburg. The accident is believed to have been due to a broken wheel on an east-bound freight, which threw two cars near the center of the train from the track. At this time fast freight No. 51, west-bound, came along. It crashed into the wrecked cars, killing the men and blocking the road several hours.

Noted Inventor Dead.

New York, July 5.—Charles Wesley Dickinson, inventor of the geometric lathe, which has made successful counterfeiting of bank notes impossible, is dead at his home in Belleville, N. J., aged 77 years. He manufactured machines for bank note engraving for the United States and many foreign governments.

Three Found Guilty.

New York, July 4.—The trial of the men accused of conspiracy in publishing reports calculated to depress the stock of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Co. was convicted. Verdicts of guilty were returned against Goslin, Parker and Davis. Robert was found "not guilty," in accordance with instructions of the court.

The Oregon Floated Off.

Shanghai, Monday, July 2.—The United States battleship Oregon, which ran ashore off the island of Hoo-Kie, in the Miao-Tao group, 35 miles northeast of Che-Foo, June 23, has been floated off and is expected to reach Port Arthur.

Australian Drought Broken.

Brisbane, Australia, July 4.—From one and one-half to three inches of rain has fallen over the whole drought-stricken portion of the colony of Queensland. It is still raining heavily and the drought has been completely broken up.

Two Killed, Thirty Injured.

Butte, Mont., July 4.—In a wreck on the Montana Central railroad, twelve miles from this city, two persons were killed and over thirty injured. The wreck was caused by spreading rails.

DOM PAUL'S TERMS.

Independence of the Republic and Amnesty for Colonial Boers.

Strathcona's Horse Has Its First Encounter With the Enemy, and One Trooper Was Killed—Capt. Cooper Is Missing.

London, July 5.—Nothing decisive has yet been heard from the columns seeking to hem in Gen. De Wet. All of Lord Roberts' field transport is engaged in supplying these columns. Operations elsewhere will be necessarily relaxed. One end of the Boers are hanging on Gen. Clery's right flank in his advance to Greylingstad. Strathcona's horse on July 1 received its baptismal fire, in which one trooper was killed. Capt. Cooper is reported as missing.

President Kruger, replying to a correspondent at Mafeking, who inquired if there was any truth in the report that he had opened peace negotiations, said: "The president and people of the South African Republic earnestly desire peace only upon two conditions—the complete independence of the republic and amnesty for the colonial Boers who fought with us. If these conditions be not granted, we will fight to the bitter end."

London, July 3.—It is clear that Lord Roberts does not consider the war in South Africa ended, as he has put a stop to the return to civilians and has ordered the mining men back to Bloemfontein. He is credited with thinking that three months must elapse before affairs will be settled enough to permit of the resumption of business.

A body of British are again reported to be in Swaziland.

Gen. Rundle issued a proclamation announcing to the farmers discovered to be harboring armed ex-burglars, and not informing against them, they will have their farms confiscated.

COOMASSIE EVACUATED.

Governor of Ashanti and Several of His Officers Break Through the Besieged Lines.

London, July 5.—A telegram has been received at the colonial office from Col. Willocks, dated Fumasi, July 3, saying native messengers from Pekki who have arrived at Bekwai announce that the governor of Ashanti, Sir Frederick Mitchell Hodgson, with several officers and their wives and families, have left Coomassie and arrived at Ekwanta, 20 miles south-east of Coomassie, and were proceeding through Denker on their way to the Cape Coast. The messengers add that many were killed in the breaking out of Coomassie.

The rumor appears to be well founded, although Col. Willocks does not say why he has not received news from the governor. The colonel intends to proceed to Coomassie and retake the place if it has been evacuated.

Sustained the Quarantine Officer.

San Francisco, July 5.—In the United States circuit court Judge Morrow held that Dr. J. J. Kinyoun, the local federal quarantine officer, had not been guilty of contempt of court in requiring persons leaving this city during the plague excitement to secure health certificates. The court found that travel within the borders of the state had not been restricted, and that the letter of the injunction against the authorities had not been violated.

Anti-Trust Law Violated.

Jackson, Miss., July 5.—In the case of the state against the insurance companies composing the Southeastern Tariff association, charging a violation of the anti-trust law, Judge Powell overruled the demurrer of the insurance companies and practically declared that the anti-trust law has been violated by the association, as all the vital points at issue in the main question were involved in the demurrer. The case now goes to trial on its merits at the next term. Thirty-seven companies are involved.

Deaths of Soldiers in Cuba.

Washington, July 5.—Five deaths from yellow fever in ten days is Gen. Woods' report in his latest casualty report, as follows: Private William H. Brown, typhoid fever; Privates John J. Dougherty, Ivy R. Bradley and Edward McGuire and Lewis Westerman, civilian in charge of well-boring, yellow fever; Privates George D. Reinegar, George Hayne and Mack Sneed, pernicious malarial fever; John D. Sutton, civilian clerk, yellow fever.

Inter-Oceanic Exposition.

New Orleans, July 5.—New Orleans citizens effected the permanent organization of a movement for an inter-oceanic exposition to be held on the completion of the Nicaraguan canal. Sidney Storey was made president; S. Odenheimer, vice president, and R. C. Morris, secretary. A number of favorable responses from other cities and commercial bodies have already been received.

Gen. Snyma a Prisoner.

London, July 4.—A dispatch from Zwerst, northeast of Mafeking, says that Gen. Snyma, who conducted the siege of Mafeking, Commandant Botha and the whole Marico command have been captured near Lichtenburg, just east of Mafeking.

Proposition Accepted.

Birmingham, Ala., July 5.—The Alabama miners in convention, voted to accept the proposition of the coal operators for last year's wage scale, and a joint convention of operators and miners will be held to sign a contract.

ST. LOUIS STRIKE OFF.

An Agreement at Last Reached Between the Transit Co. and Its Former Employees.

St. Louis, July 3.—An agreement between the St. Louis Transit Co. and its former employees was signed by representatives of the Transit Co. and the executive committee of the employees, which ends the strike. The agreement is as follows:

"1. The provisions of the agreement of March 10, 1900, as to rates of pay and hours of service will be continued in force by the company.

"2. Every employee of the company to be free to join or not to join any organization, and no discrimination to be made for or against him because of the manner in which he exercises his freedom.

"3. Any attempt on the part of any employee to induce another employee, by intimidation or threats, to join or not to join any union shall be cause for the immediate discharge of the person guilty of such attempt.

"4. Any attempt to influence any employee by an official of the company to join or not to join any union shall be cause for discharge of such official.

"5. The company will meet any employee or committee of employees, whether representing themselves, other employees or an association of employees, regarding any matter of mutual interest.

"6. For the purpose of filling vacancies which may now exist or hereafter arise, the committee of former employees shall prepare a list of the men who were in the company's service on May 7 last, and as the company may now or hereafter need additional men it will select them exclusively from this list until it is exhausted, not interfering, however, with men now in the service. No person shall be eligible to this list who has been guilty of any acts of lawlessness or violence.

"The strike is hereby declared off."

AN AMERICAN MOBBED.

Hacked to Pieces By Moroccan Religious Fanatics and Burned Before Life Was Extinct.

Tangiers, July 3.—There is great excitement at Tangiers owing to French encroachments on the oasis of Tount. A mob killed the manager of a French concern who was an American citizen. The British consul has demanded the assistance of the authorities to protect his houses, and the Jewish ghetto is besieged. Thelegation here is making serious representations on the subject.

The name of the victim of the mob was Marois Essagin. The outrage occurred on Thursday last. Essagin, while riding on horseback through a narrow street, jolted against the mule of a Moroccan religious fanatic, and a dispute ensued, the crowd which gathered siding with the priest. Essagin in self-defense drew his revolver and fired, wounding a native. This was the signal for a general attack upon the American, who received dozens of knife wounds and whose body was burned, according to some, before life was extinct.

The French minister was informed of the crime by a special messenger, and he notified the American consul. Both the minister and the consul called upon Sidi Torres, the sultan's minister of foreign affairs at Tangier, and protested against the outrage.

SUMNER BACK FROM MANILA.

Gen. Shafter Announces Its Arrival and the Casualties That Have Occurred on Board.

Washington, July 3.—A telegram has been received at the war department from Gen. Shafter announcing the arrival of the transport Sumner from Manila with a number of officers and sick and insane and discharged soldiers.

The following casualties occurred during the voyage: Frank Clayton, late musician Company E, 19th infantry, died June 1 of isolation and acute alcoholism; John J. McLaughlin, private, Company E, 46th infantry, died June 27 of chronic dysentery, chronic interstitial nephritis and valvular disease of the heart, and Patrick J. McMahon, private, Company H, 22d infantry, died June 26 of chronic dysentery.

Insurgent Leader Surrenders.

Washington, July 3.—The following cable, dated Manila, was received at the war department Monday morning: Gen. Aquino, prominent leader of insurgent forces, surrendered unconditionally to First Lieut. John J. O'Donnell, with Macabebe scouts, on June 29, with 64 rifles and ammunition. (Signed) MACARTHUR.

American Mothers to Meet.

Chicago, July 3.—The League of American Mothers has sent out a call for a national conference to be held in Chicago August 1, 2, 3 and 4. The four days will be given to the study and discussion of child training and how to create right neighborhood conditions for the upliftment of the young.

Cuban Teachers Arrive.

Boston, July 3.—The United States transport Shortcreek, from Cuba, landed 308 Cuban teachers, all men, who are to study at Harvard this summer. They came mostly from Havana and adjacent portions of the island.

Forest Fires in Arizona.

Phoenix, Ariz., July 3.—Reports from Eastern and Southern Arizona state that forest fires have broken out afresh in many of the mountain ranges, and, unless there is rain soon, the loss in timber will be great.

ALL WERE MASSACRED.

Not a Single Foreigner Now Alive Within the City of Peking.

The Allied Forces at Tien-Tsin Have Taken the Native City of That Place—Chinese Losses Between 7,000 and 8,000.

Shanghai, July 3.—The emperor committed suicide under compulsion of Prince Tuan, June 19. The empress dowager also took poison, but is yet alive, though reported insane from the effects of the poison. This was officially reported to the German consul.

Shanghai, July 5.—Three Chinese servants of foreigners have, it is rumored from a good source, escaped from Peking. They report that all the foreigners (1,000 in number, including 400 soldiers, 100 members of the Chinese customs staff and a number of women and children) held out till after their ammunition was exhausted in the British legation. The legation was finally burned and all the foreigners were killed. It is reported that Kwan-Iisu and the dowager empress have been poisoned.

London, July 5.—"Not a single foreigner is now alive in Peking," is the latest Chinese report which has reached Shanghai. Earlier reports from the same sources describe the condition of the British legation as something awful. It is said that the rooms of the legation were filled with sick and wounded, the killed lying in the streets in heaps. It is believed that many members and officials of the Tsung Li Yamen perished when the German guard, maddened by the murder of Baron von Ketteler, the German minister, set fire to the building.

The commanders of the allies in Tien-Tsin inform the correspondents that it would be suicide to attempt to reach Peking with the troops now available in the face of the colossal force of imperial troops and Boxers occupying the country between Tien-Tsin and Peking. So, far from taking the offensive, the 12,000 international troops at Tien-Tsin and the 8,000 others at Taku and intermediate points can barely keep up communications, fighting incessantly with overwhelming numbers, using far more numerous artilleries than the allies. This telegram has been received:

"Shanghai, July 4, 11:10 a. m. (via Che-Foo).—Tien-Tsin city fell between 7 and 8 o'clock in the morning of June 30."

It is understood that Shanghai undoubtedly referred to the native city of Tien-Tsin, from which the Chinese have been bombarding the foreign quarters, and the dispatch is taken to mean that the allies are more than holding their own.

Other advices, received by way of Shanghai, aver that the Chinese losses around Tien-Tsin are between 7,000 and 8,000, according to official estimates.

The correspondent of the Express at Che-Foo says: "Adm. Seymour was wounded while sitting in a house at Tien-Tsin by Chinese sharpshooters. Official news received at Che-Foo shows that the Chinese have been guilty of horrible cruelty toward the wounded and captured, subjecting them to what is known as 'ling che,' or the slicing process. Under this hideous rite the bodies of the fallen have been mutilated."

Washington, July 5.—While doubt existed at first as to the extent of the casualties reported by Adm. Kempff via Che-Foo, the navy department has finally accepted his cablegram as showing that the casualties were ten killed and 37 wounded among the American landing forces. Of the ten killed, four had been previously reported, namely, Boatswain's Mate Thomas, Gunner's Mate Benson, Apprentice Broman and Landsman Severson, all with McCalla's detachment accompanying Adm. Seymour's column. The other six deaths were among the marines attached to Maj. Walters' command, and occurred during the attack upon Tien-Tsin and the march thereto. The history of the latter as shown by the records here was as follows:

Corp. James Francis Lannigan, aged 32, enlisted at Brooklyn, August 26, 1899. Next of kin, Mrs. Arthur Noble, 1322 Rochester avenue, Boston.

Private James K. Miller, aged 28, enlisted at Philadelphia, December 14, 1898. Next of kin, Miss Margaret Miller, 617 Light street, Baltimore.

Private John Hunter, aged 25, enlisted at League Island, Pa., June 14, 1896. Next of kin not given.

Private Edward T. Provansal, aged 25, enlisted at Boston, May 4, 1899. Next of kin, Isadore Provansal, of Windsor Mills, Canada.

Private W. H. Nichols, aged 24, enlisted at Mare Island, Cal., November 15, 1898. Next of kin, Wm. Nichols, Felsom, Cal.

JOKE GAINED HIS POINT.

A Michigan Statesman's Clever Ruse Worked on a Committee on Pensions.

Not long ago Congressman "Hank" Smith, of the Second Michigan district, worked a joke off on the house committee on pensions. It should be explained, says the Chicago Chronicle, that this committee is not the one which has charge of the pensions which grew out of the civil war, says a correspondent. Its functions appertain to the granting of pensions to the widows and veterans of the Mexican and Black Hawk wars and other ancient unpleasantnesses. It should also be pointed out that one of their rules is that no widow's pension shall be larger than $8 a month. This proceeds upon the theory that any widow who survives a veteran of these wars must be a comparatively young woman and that she must have married the veteran in his dotage to get his pension. The new member from Michigan appeared before the committee at its last meeting and in an incidental and smiling way alluded to the rule.

"That is a fine rule," said he in a guileless sort of way. "I sympathize with its purpose and believe it should stand. But just to show good faith I am going to propose an amendment. I move that it be amended so as to read 'except in the case of widows over 100 years of age.'"

The members of the committee are always in favor of a joke and the proposition was adopted with a unanimous laugh.

And thereupon "Hank" produced from his pocket a bill to grant a pension of $12 a month to Mrs. Hixon, of Clinton, Mich. She had just passed her one hundredth year. It was not necessary to explain that her husband had served to within one day of the time requisite to get a pension in the regular manner. The committee reported the bill favorably.

Hurt Him Professionally.

A New York barkeeper who was spending his vacation in Maine found himself one evening in a hotel in Portland. While he lingered a terrible storm took place. The windows of the room in which he was sitting were broken by hailstones "almost as big as eggs." The proprietor of the hotel noticed that the barkeeper turned aside to drop a tear.

"Does the storm scare you?" he ventured to ask his guest.

"It isn't that," replied the barkeeper, "but I can't bear to see so much cracked ice wasted in a prohibition state."—N. Y. Mail and Express.

The wind blew the fine flakes of snow under the roof of the porch, and they fell and melted on her iron-gray locks. She did not look at him when she began, nor did she give him her eyes steadily once through the whole recital.

"You've heard 'bout yore pa's bush-whackin' days up in Tennessee endurin' of the war," she began. "He was a sort of a head man against 'em all. They made a good deal by it, fust an' last. He used to tell me all about it 'fore we got married an' I was such a foolish young thing that I thought his conduct was smart, an' that Jade Fanshaw was about the finest ketch in them mountains. They did their biggest business an' made their biggest hauls by capturin' folks that was travelin' heer an' yan through the mountains to git away from the war, as most of sech folks had money about 'em. They didn't kill often, unless it was through lack of proper judgment, like, for instance, in thresteinin' a man to give up his treasure by drawin' 'im up on a rope an' lettin' 'im hang a mite too long. Whar you come in was this away." Mrs. Fanshaw cautiously closed the door leading into the hall and then went on: "A man and his wife an' a baby about four months old come 'long in a carriage driv' by a nigger man, an' yore pa's crowd was lyin' in wait fur 'em an' heft 'em up in a lonely mountain pass. The man was a young confederate officer, an' the woman was mighty good-lookin' an' dressed as fine as a fiddle. That's one reason the gang thought they had money. They ordered all of 'em to git out on the ground, an' the officer did so at once, an' tuck the baby from his mother so she could git out.

"Well, they say he had no sooner put foot to the ground 'fore the nigger driver whipped up the horses like mad an' managed to dodge the shots an' git away. The tale Jake always told me was that the officer started off at full speed after the carriage an' got shot accidentally, fallin' with you in his arms. The wust part of it fur the gang was that the man had no money about him, an' they had a live squallin' baby on hands. Then they drew lots as to who was to put the baby out of pain, an' it fell to Jade, an' he fetched you to put the job off on me. I'd been married two year an' never had no child, an' as I was by myself in a lone cabin from morning till night an' often all night, I begged Jade to let me have you fur company an' he didn't seem to want to bother more about it, he give in. Nobody but the gang ever knowed you wasn't my child an' they scattered to all parts of the world after the surrender. After that Dave an' the gals was born an' nobody ever suspected that you wasn't a Fanshaw."

Ronald, pale and excited, leaned against the water-shelf.

"Do you know the name of the officer?" he asked.

"That wasn't a thing to show who he was," answered Mrs. Fanshaw. "He didn't have a thing in his pockets except a silver tobacco box. You've seed it a hundred times; all the children out their teeth on it; it's in the front room with matches in it."

She went into the house and brought it back.

"I've told many a lie about this little trick," she admitted, with a shrug and a little smile as she gave it to him. He had seen the box often before, and remembered that words were engraved on it. He held it to the light, making out the following: "From Elizabeth to—"

"This does not help me much," he said, "but I shall not rest till I know who I am. Is any of the old band living now?"

"That must be some of 'em, but the Lord only knows whar they are; they seemed ashamed of their war conduct, an' ain't anxious to keep up old friendships. Now, Ron, remember yore promise!"

"I shall do nothing till you are away from here," he said, "and then you shall never be blamed. The one to be blamed is there." He made a gesture toward the graveyard over the hills.

"I reckon you are right," she sighed; "maybe I'd a-had other company when I was growin' up my end would a-been different."

CHAPTER XX.

Another summer had come. Ronald was now Redding's law partner, and lived in town. He had put up no sign, having told his partner that he would not do so till he had found out his rightful name. Dave and his mother and sisters had moved to Texas and purchased a good farm from the sale of their own place and the insurance money.

One morning in July Redding bustled into the office as our hero sat reading at his desk. The old man wore a look of suppressed excitement and looked as if he were dying to have Ronald ask him what had happened. But our hero only gave him a hurried good morning and went on with his reading.

Redding sat down at his own desk and threw up the roller top with a great clatter. "Well," he began, "you don't have the least curiosity in the world about anything. Why haven't you axed a feller whar he's been all mornin'?" Ronald smiled as he looked up from his book. "I thought you might be ill. I was going to send round to see about you."

"You couldn't guess, to save yore life. The truth is, old Hasbrooke sent for me just as I was leaving the breakfast table, an' I went right out to the plantation. What he wanted, an' what I dropped on to while I was thar, would fill a wonder book. He's laid up with a sprained ankle, or he would have come in to talk over the matter with us."

The old lawyer pinched his nose several times and winked slyly into Ronald's expectant face. "You had a fool notion, young man, that I was doin' a sort of charity act in takin' you in with me, but I knowed which side my bread was buttered on. I knowed you'd draw business, and plenty of it. Well, the colonel opened up by sayin' that he'd always felt a big interest in you, an' sence you've made such a rep' with yore speech on the Lester robbery case he's made up his mind to he'p push you along."

Ronald's face had fallen. There was something in the idea of Col. Hasbrooke's patronage that offended his pride.

"I am sure I have never expected aid from him in any way, and it depends on the nature of his proposition as to whether I shall—"

"Don't fly off the handle," grinned Redding; "it's only business for the firm. He said his affairs had never been managed satisfactorily by Lee and West (it seems they got to thinkin' they owned about all the old man had). He said it had got so he had to go in to see 'em two or three times 'fore they would atten' to what he wanted, an' they was paid a lump sum by the year. He has just offered us the job, an' I accepted it before he could bat his eyes. I call it the fattest thing I ever run across, an' I owe you for my half of it."

"He is certainly very kind," answered Ronald, his brow ruffled with a frown; "for your sake, at any rate, I shall raise no objection, but he and I—"

"Ah!" broke in Redding, leaning forward in his chair. "I kinder thought he acted queer about it; he kept axin' ef I knowed for sure if you'd object, an' said maybe I ort to see you first before takin' up the proposition, but I knowed a good thing, an' didn't want no chance o' lettin' it go, so I tot' 'im you'd be tickled to death. Well, even ef you an' 'im have been at outs, he's showed a willingness to patch it up, an' you ought to let by-gones be by-gones."

"Oh, it will be all right," said our hero. "I shall write him a note of appreciation."

"But I hain't told you all yet," Redding's face took on a serious look, "an' I know you will want to kick me fur meddlin' in yore private affairs, but the truth is, I got my foot in it before I thought. He was axin' about yore mother an' the children—I mean the Fanshaws—an' somehow I felt so good over what he had done that I up an' let yore cat out of the bag. I confided to him every blame thing you've told me about your family mystery, an' the search you'd made up in Tennessee for the grave. Well, sir, the old man looked like he was goin' to faint. I never seed abody act like he did; he jumped up on his sore foot an' began to yell half the time in pain an' the other half to Miss Evelyn, who was in the jinin' room with Mrs. Lancaster. She got heer yesterday. They come to the door just as he got thar, an' they all went into the room an' fell to jabberin' like rips. After awhile I heerd 'im yell for camphor an' water, an' I loved somebody was dead. It turned out that the old lady keeled over in a dead swoon. I set thar for half an hour wonderin' what on earth to do, till Hasbrooke finally come in lookin' as peculiar as o' the eyes as ef he'd been ketchin' stealin' a sheep. He apologized for keepin' me waitin', but said he stayed to have a talk with Mrs. Lancaster after she come to. He said he was sorry he didn't feel at liberty to make a full explanation, but that the old lady wanted me to ride to town an' send you out thar as fast as you could travel. He followed me to the front steps, an' then he said: 'Tell Mr. Fanshaw that she can tell him all about his parentage—tell him to make haste!'

For a moment both men stared into each other's eyes.

"Perhaps Mrs. Lancaster knew my parents," Ronald said finally. "Mr. Redding, you can understand that this is of the greatest importance to me. I shall go out at once."

"That's right," agreed Redding. "I left my boss latched at the door. Go ahead; I believe you are on the right track to a solution of that matter."

CHAPTER XXI.

Arriving at Carnleigh half an hour later, for he had ridden hard, Ronald found the colonel hobbling about near the tennis court, a big stick in his hand. Seeing the new arrival, he came to the walk to meet him, his whole body working with agitation.

"Come right in," he said, giving Ronald his hand. "She's dying with impatience. She wanted to drive out to meet you on the road, but I made her wait. Did you ever hear of the like?"

Ronald wanted to say that he was still in the dark, but his host was loudly calling to a groom and waving his hand towards the house. Just then our hero saw Mrs. Lancaster standing in the doorway and wildly motioning him to approach. Leaving the lane man to get up the steps as best he could, Ronald ascended to the woman, who stood both hands outstretched, her distended eyes boring into his own.

"Oh, don't you know yet?" she questioned, as she read his blank face, "can't you guess the truth?" She wrung his hand and stepped backward to the door of the drawing-room as if to draw him away from all eyes save her own.

"Mr. Redding told me," he began, "that you might be able to give me some information—"

"Don't you see," she broke in, with warm tenderness. "Don't you feel the truth? I am your mother!"

He found himself unable to articulate a word. Something seemed to bear down on his brain for a moment there was a blur before his sight. As if in a dream he felt her leading him across the drawing-room to a sofa.

"I am your mother," she said, as she drew him down to a seat beside her, "and I thank God for allowing me to find it out before my death. I have loved you in a strange, unaccountable way ever since I met you. When I heard you were in prison it almost drove me wild. Evelyn wrote me about your arrest, and then it was a week before I learned of your release. My name is Elizabeth; I gave your father that silver tobacco-box; and, moreover, I lost you exactly where you were taken during the war. I am so happy! I am actually afraid my joy will kill me."

She began to cry silently, and in his desire to comfort her he found himself clasping her hand and stroking back the white hair from her brow.

"And I am glad you are my mother," he said, simply. "You have been my ideal woman ever since that day you came to see me."

They sat together for an hour, making plans for the future.

"Evelyn and I are going to spend next year abroad," she told him, "and you are going with us. Col. Hasbrooke says he is too old for the journey and we shall need a man."

His face clouded for the first time during the interview.

"But Col. Hasbrooke—"

"He is simply wild to call you son-in-law," Mrs. Lancaster broke in, with a laugh. "Evelyn has been almost dead with sorrow since he separated you. I really believe he was coming round anyway. Yesterday he said a great deal about your nobility of character and talent. He always listens to me, and I told him there was nothing to be done but to let you have her. But that reminds me; she is waiting to see you. Poor, dear child! I never was so selfish—so thoughtless. I'm going to send her to you."

She rose and he nervously held her hands, a fixed look on his face.

"Are you sure," he faltered, "that I have the right to?"

His mother drew herself up to her full height. "You are a Lancaster," she said, proudly.

When she had passed through the heavy curtains obscuring a room in the rear, he sat for several minutes fairly dazed by what had taken place. His reverie was disturbed by the coming of Evelyn. A flush was on her slightly attenuated face, and her eyes were red and sparkled as if she had been crying, but she came to him with a firm, confident step, and put both her hands in his.

"It is all so wonderful," she said, simply. "I am actually too choked up to speak. I've been laughing, crying, and doubting the truth of it by turns ever since Mr. Redding went away."

"It seems like a dream to me," he made answer. "I am afraid I shall wake and find myself back in my little room over there on the farm."

"Mrs. Lancaster told me just now," said Evelyn, "that she had forgotten to tell you your given name. She asked me to inform you, but I hate to pronounce it. I shall never call you anything but Ronald. Will that suit you, sir?"

They were seated side by side on the sofa.

"I shall never want you to call me anything else," she smiled; "but I must own up to a little curiosity as to what I am legally entitled to."

"Charles Erskine," answered Evelyn. "Mrs. Lancaster was a Miss Erskine. How do you like it?"

"It's not bad," he laughed; "perhaps I may grow up to it in time."

Just then Hasbrooke looked in at the door and limped towards them, an almost boyish look of embarrassment on his face.

"I am going to beg your forgiveness for what I said the last time you were here," he said.

"I did not blame you, Col. Hasbrooke," was the reply.

"But I blame you," Evelyn turned on Ronald, suddenly. "If I had known your stupid reasons for giving me up I should never have consented—never! I thought it was because—because you thought me too great a responsibility, and a burden."

"Well, settle it between you," smiled her father. And when he had quitted the room they did.

THE END.

Effect of Hope.

He was dying from the effects of smoking too many campaign cigars.

To those who wept at his bedside he argued in a lofty spirit of philosophy that death was inevitable.

"When you give a man rope enough," he exclaimed, "his doom is at once sealed. My fate, if it shows anything in particular, simply shows that he has not necessarily to hang himself!"—Detroit Journal.

An Easy Question.

MOMENTUM OF RAILWAY CARS

As It Was Singularly Illustrated in the Wreck of a Passenger Train at Toledo, Ohio.

The momentum of a train of heavy passenger coaches and Pullmans is well known to railroad men, but its potential power is not realized by laymen not initiated into the mysteries of car construction, says the Chicago Chronicle. A passenger coach is several times as heavy as a freight car, and but little lighter than a locomotive.

The dynamic force developed in the impact when a train of coaches and sleepers going at the rate of 50 miles per hour, strikes an obstacle was manifested in a peculiar manner some time ago in Toledo, where a wreck occurred on the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton railroad. Half a dozen cars loaded with wheat were standing on a side-track, when a fast train came plunging along. The switchman was at the switch trying to close it, and until the train was a few rods away hoped to succeed in time to avert a crash. But he failed and the thousands of pounds of steel and iron dashed past him before he was able to give a warning signal.

Less than 50 yards from the switch stood the cars of wheat. Before the engineer had time to reverse the lever, there was a crash, and a grinding and crunching of timbers. Neither the engineer nor fireman attempted to jump. They staid at their posts, and to this they owe their lives.

The high rate of speed at which the train was running and the heavy weight behind the engine drove it along. The front trucks became dislodged, and wedging these under the end of the first freight car, an inclined plane was formed by the engine, up which the huge mechanism ran on through the end of the box car. It began to burrow its way through the wheat. By the time the engine had reached the further end of the car, the wheat cars were under way, and they started down the track. The impact had transferred all the momentum to the freight cars, and the passenger coaches remained on the track not much the worse for the collision.

When the wrecking crew appeared on the scene, a sight such as none had ever seen before met the eyes of the startled men. Half a mile from the train of passenger cars was the engine, hidden in a box car. The side of the car was there, and the engine, with the exception of the cowcatcher, the forward trucks and the smokestack, stood quietly in the car, almost hidden from sight. The top of the cab was broken down, imprisoning the engineer and stoker, but neither of them was harmed.

The total damage amounted to about $500, the small amount being due to the fact that none of the cars left the track. The enormous expenditure of energy had been accomplished by forcing the engine into the car and starting the cars down the track. Railroad men, who came to look at the wreck, said unanimously they had never seen nor heard of a similar freak of engine and cars. The wreck occurred after dark and before morning the wreckage was cleared away, making it impossible for photographs to be taken.

MAN'S MOST SENSITIVE POINT.

When the Tip of the Tongue Is Touched the Whole Body Thrills.

The tip of the tongue possesses the most perfect sense of touch. The finest hair is felt upon its surface, and even when fingers fail to ascertain the qualities of certain bodies, contact with the tongue immediately recognizes them. The relative sensibility of various parts of the body is best measured by means of a pair of compasses, the points of which are tipped with cork. The tip of the tongue can distinguish two distinct impressions when the compass points are only half a line, or the twelfth of an inch, apart, the tip of the finger when they are one line apart. Other spots, says a scientific exchange, vary still more widely; this distance at the lips is two lines; the tip of the nose, three lines; the cheek, five lines; palm of the hand, five lines; forehead, ten lines; back of the hand, 14 lines; chest, 20 lines; back and thigh, 30 lines.

If, however, this experiment is repeated with a pair of compasses capable by slight pressure of pricking, it will be found that there is no corresponding difference between the parts in their sensibility to pain. On the contrary, in places where the sense of touch is most keen, the sense of pain is in the first instance at least deadened, and the parts most callous in discriminating the double touching points are by no means the least alive to the sensation excited by their pressure. The tip of the tongue has 50 times the tactile discrimination of the arm, but the arm is more sensitive to a sharp point, applied with moderate pressure to the skin, than either the tongue or the finger, and is at least as alive to the presence of a very light body, a hair, or feather, drawn along the surface. Curiously enough, the right hand, which is more sensitive to touch than the left, is less sensitive to temperature. If the two hands are dipped in two basins of water at the same temperature the left hand will feel the greatest sensation of heat.

Taxed for Wearing Male Attire.

In France women are allowed to wear men's attire, but they must pay for the privilege. The amount of the tax which a woman pays for wearing masculine garb is about ten dollars a year, but her willingness to pay the tax does not insure her the right to wear these garments. As a matter of fact, the right is conferred by the government as a tribute of great merit.—N. Y. Sun.

HON. W. J. BRYAN, of Nebraska.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

JAILER.

We are authorized to announce WM. C. DODSON as a candidate for Jailer of Bourbon County, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

We are authorized to announce GEO. W. JUDY as a candidate for Jailer of Bourbon County, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

We are authorized to announce W. H. BOONE as a candidate for Jailer, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

We are authorized to announce WM. B. MICHEL as a candidate for Jailer of Bourbon County, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

ASSESSOR.

We are authorized to announce W. B. PINCKARD as a candidate for Assessor of Bourbon County, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

We are authorized to announce HARVEY HUBER, of Paris, as a candidate for Assessor of Bourbon County, with HENRY L. CARWOOD, of North Middletown, as deputy, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

We are authorized to announce CHAS. PEDDICO as a candidate for the office of Assessor, subject to the action of the Democratic party. If elected, my deputy will be W. G. McClintock.

FOR CONGRESS.

We are authorized to announce JOHN R. ALLEN, of Fayette county, a candidate for Congress from the Seventh Congressional District, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

All Democrats who are for John R. Allen should go to their voting places before 2 o'clock (standard time), as the convention will be called exactly at 2 o'clock, Friday, July 6th.

BRYAN NOMINATED.

KANSAS CITY, July 5, 8:41 p. m.

Hon. W. J. Bryan was nominated by acclamation last night, amid intense enthusiasm.

Hon. Adlai Stevenson, of Illinois, is being boomed for Vice President and it is believed that he will be nominated.

The Democratic National Convention was called to order in Kansas City Wednesday at noon by Chairman Jones. Gov. Thomas, of Colorado, was temporary chairman, and at night Hon. J. D. Richardson, of Tennessee, was elected permanent Chairman.

The resolutions committee by a vote of 26 to 22, decided in favor of an explicit declaration for silver. The minority wanted a simple reaffirmation of the Chicago platform. David B. Hill led the fight of the conservatives and says that it will be renewed on the floor of the convention.

The convention has been delayed by the platform committee failing to report. The immense crowd went wild at the first mention of Bryan's name. David B. Hill was also given a magnificent ovation.

Gov. Beckham addressed the convention yesterday and was given an ovation.

A Question of Strength.

Mr. Trimble acknowledged in his speech, that Col. Allen could poll 500 more votes in this District than he, Trimble, could; and we all know that the habit is fixed when a man votes for one man on the Democratic ticket, that he usually votes the whole ticket, and if Col. Allen is 500 votes stronger than Trimble, is not that one reason why Democrats should support him in his race? Remember that McKinley carried Kentucky by less than 300 votes, and if Kentucky should be the pivotal State and a difference of 300 votes should lose the State to Bryan and thereby lose the Presidency, would not every Democrat who failed to vote for John R. Allen, feel that he was Particeps Crimini? In the defeat of Bryan? Let no good Democrat make such a mistake.—Kentuckian-Citizen.

Bourbon Wheat Sales.

WHEAT was quoted here yesterday at seventy-two cents per bushel. E. O. Fretwell has bought the following crops at seventy-three and seventy-four cents: Kenney & Webster 2,000 bushels, Conway & Wilson 1,200, Kenney Nichol's 1,600, John Roseberry 900, Sidney G. Clay 900, George Burke 1,000.

Mrs. Minnie Fronecker, sister to Senator William Goebel, says his will, dated about four years ago, has been found among some old papers, and that his entire estate is left to his brother Arthur.

The late Judge Jewell's remarks on politics and Peter Vinegar's observations regarding the weather will be fully borne out by the experience of this week.

MR. J. V. LYTLE goes to Lexington today to engage the services of an experienced blacksmith. Mr. Lytle and James Powers will open a blacksmith shop in a few days in East Paris.

The Cynthiana baseball team defeated the Paris club in a game Wednesday at Howe's Park, near Paris. The score was 18 to 16. Both teams were composed of boys about sixteen years old.

PHYSICIANS advise keeping the feet warm in winter and cool in summer. George McWilliams sells the coolest Summer shoe on earth—the Hanan. Buy the Hanan and get ease and comfort.

MISS NANNIE CLAY and Miss Flora Hill sang a beautiful duet at the morning service Sunday at the Christian Church. It was a pleasing feature of the service. Prof. Gutzwiller played the accompaniment.

THE NEWS was misinformed regarding the statement that all of the jury in the Utterback case had signed a petition, for his pardon. Mr. Wyatt Thompson did not sign the petition, being for a fifteen years sentence.

PETER VINEGAR, a colored preacher, of Lexington, who has made himself noted by delivering a sermon entitled "And It Was a Damned Hot Day," will preach at the opera house Sunday afternoon and night. He will probably use his "Hot Day" sermon.

MR. TICE HUTSELL, of Cincinnati, who has lately been visiting relatives near Paris, has gone to Potosky, Mich., to accept a position as clerk in the Arlington Hotel. Mr. Hutssel was room clerk at the Gibson House, in Cincinnati, until his health failed some months ago.

Will Sail Wednesday.

MESSRS. Talbot Clay, J. W. Bacon, W. E. Grigsby, Dr. F. L. Lapsley, Ed Tucker, Frank P. Lowry and Walter Champ, of this city, will leave Sunday morning on the 5:15 L. & N. train for a trip to Europe. They go over the Pennsylvania Lines to New York, and will sail at ten o'clock Wednesday morning on the American Line Steamer "New York." The party will be accompanied to New York by Mr. John Feeney, of the L. & N. Messrs. Lowry and Champ will return home after visiting Paris and London, but the other members of the party will visit Berne, Lucerne and Interlaken in Switzerland, Genoa, Pisa, Florence, Rome, Naples, Pompeii and Venice in Italy, and then proceed to Munich, going to Oberammergau for the "Passion Play." The party then enters Germany, sailing down the Rhine to Cologne, thence into Holland, stopping at Rotterdam. From Rotterdam they sail for London, and will arrive home about the first of September. The young men have many friends to wish them "bon voyage."

The District Convention.

MESSRS. DENIS DUNDON, D. C. Parrish and E. B. January, the committee appointed to make arrangements for the District Convention here next Tuesday, July 10th, have almost completed the arrangements for the Convention. The sessions of the Convention will be held at the Court house, and between 250 and 300 delegates in attendance. The committee has engaged the Cynthiana Band to furnish music for the occasion. The Convention will probably last two or three days. The citizens will extend the visitors a hearty welcome.

All Democrats who are for John R. Allen should go to their voting places before 2 o'clock (standard time), as the convention will be called exactly at 2 o'clock, Friday, July 6th.

Attention F. & A. M.

A stated communication of Paris Lodge, No. 2, F. & A. M., will be held to-night. Work in first and second degrees. Members are urgently requested to attend.

Fine China Painting.

The beautiful display of decorated china on display in Frank & Co.'s show window this week is the work of Miss Carrie Frank, daughter of Mr. L. Frank. There are ten pieces in the collection, which is the handsomest in the city. Miss Frank's work is exquisite and is quite a surprise to her friends. The collection has been much admired.

DR. LOUIS LANDMAN, optician, of Cincinnati, will be at the Windsor Hotel, on Tuesday, July 10th.

Cool Breathing Place.

Persons who suffer from heat in town will find cool breathing places up Stoner, with the launch "Kentucky" ready to take them up at any time. The launch will leave the landing every hour.

Married folks will find this a delightful pleasure these Summer days and evenings. Stoner is beautiful these moonlight nights.

The Fourth in Paris.

The Fourth was quietly observed in Paris. The banks and the postoffices were closed, and a few flags were displayed. Fire crackers popped occasionally during the day, and at night rockets and Roman candles were fired off in various parts of the city.

A number of Parisians spent the Fourth at the Lexington Chautauqua, some attended the races and base ball in Cincinnati, and a party of twenty-two young folks went up Stoner on the launch "Kentucky" and spent a merry evening shooting fireworks on the water.

Photograph Gallery Opened.

The photograph gallery in the Agricultural Bank Building is now open for business and a cordial invitation to call is extended to the people of Bourbon and surrounding counties. The gallery equipment is second to none in the State, the furnishings being new and up-to-date, and the dressing rooms having every convenience. The gallery is in charge of an experienced photographer and the work will be guaranteed to be satisfactory in every respect. The elevator at the Main street entrance takes you to the door of the gallery. Call and inspect the finished work on display.

A Religion of Lust.

Two Mormon elders have been visiting homes in the Hutchison neighborhood for the past ten days, seeking to introduce the tenets of their religion of lust. The Mormon religion permits the practice of polygamy, which is against the constitution of the United States and of every State in the Union. Freedom of religious belief is right and proper when that religion does not permit or encourage practices which are against the laws of the State and Nation. These missionaries seek to use our country school-houses and make new converts in Kentucky. They should be treated with scant courtesy.

THE MOVING THROU.

Notes About Our Guests, Arrivals and Departures—Society's Doings.

Nonan, of Winchester; Will Hickey, of Georgetown; Misses Beth Higgins and Margaret Gallagher, of Louisville; Miss Smith, of Cynthiana.

—The Lexington Leader says: "Miss Allen Lary gave a pretty five o'clock tea Tuesday afternoon at her home on East High street in honor of Miss Mary Hearn Lockhart and Miss Willa Bowden, of Paris. The decorations were very artistic of pink and white sweet peas and ferns, hostess and guests wore dainty summer muslins and all had a most charming afternoon. Miss Lary's guests were: Miss Lockhart and Miss Bowden, Misses Nettie Rhodes, Evelyn Powell, of St. Louis, Nannie Elsbury, Nannie Bowden, of Paris, Sara Chorn, Margaret Hart and Margaret Garrett, of Pisgah, Eunice Brown."

A party of about twenty Parisians will leave on July 17th for a camping trip to Olympian Springs.

THE advertisement of Mrs. Lizzie Walker's private school appears in this issue. Mrs. Walker has had many years' experience and gives special attention to primary work. She leaves to-day for Lake Chautauqua, N. Y., where she will take a special course in primary work.

A Parisian Honored.

John W. Kellar, a former Parisian, a grandson of Jacob Kellar, who is now Commissioner of Public Charities in New York City, was further honored this week at Kansas City by the New York Democrats. Mr. Kellar was endorsed by the New York delegation as their candidate for Vice President. Mr. Kellar has many old friends in this city who are pleased to see him honored. Mr. Kellar is a cousin of editor G. R. Kellar, of Carlisle.

We will devote eight large tables to this sale. On these tables you will find Dress Goods, Silks, Table Linens, Napkins and Towels, Ladies' Shirt Waists, Muslin, Underwear, White Piques, Notions, Hosiery, Etc.

REMEMBER—Three Days Only.

After that all goods go back to regular prices. Goods Marked in Plain Blue Figures.

A Masterpiece of Art Tailoring are the Mid-Summer Creations in Men's and Boy's Apparel. Fully a Hundred Varieties.

Every new shade from the most noted mills in America and Europe has been made up for us by the most foremost factories into the latest and most stylish garments by the best skilled union tailors. Nothing is spared in manufacturing our goods in order to make the most attractive styles. Critical people will at once discover the points of superiority in fit and finish and the extremely low prices is the most wonderful feature. Our study always is "How Cheap Can We Sell Our Garments," and not "How Much Will They Bring." Our facilities for laying are as great as any on earth. Buying woolsens and trimmings direct from the best standard mills in the world, for cash, conducting an enormous business with insignificant expenses, all these surprises are accomplished.

More styles now shown than ever in Men's and Boy's Spring Suits. They are in Cassimeres, Scotchies, Vicunas, Cheviotts, Thebets, Worsteds and Flannels, in light and dark shades. Figured and plain fabrics in weights suitable for all seasons at $5, $6, $7.50, $10, $12 and $15.

If you cannot read this small print at a distance of 14 inches your eyesight is failing and should have immediate attention:

Imperial spectacles and eyeglasses have perfect lenses, always perfectly centred and made of purest material, set in frames of the highest elasticity and consequently of greatest durability, united with the utmost lightness and elegance. When both frames and lenses are scientifically fitted by Dr. C. H. Bowen's system they always give satisfaction for they are perfect. Never buy cheap spectacles, nor of men who do not know how to fit them. You will get poorly adjusted spectacles, or poor, imperfect lenses, and are better off without any glasses than with either of these defects. Buy Imperial spectacles of a reliable, skillful dealer, and they will last longer without change and be cheapest in the end.

We have engaged the services of Dr. C. H. Bowen who will visit our store on the second and last Thursdays of each month and invite all to call and have their eyes examined, for which there is no charge. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

Next visit—Thursday, July 12, 1900. Hello, 170.

MR. LIMKINS' TOAST

(From the Wausau, Wis., Philosopher, Reprinted by Special Permission.)

"SILAS," said Mrs. Limkins, as she gave her chair a hitch to bring herself face to face with Mr. Limkins; "I have something to say to you. Put down that paper; I want your whole attention."

Mr. Limkins reversed the cross of his legs, and shifting his paper slightly so as to cover his face, continued to read. "I want you to wake up a little," continued Mrs. Limkins. "You are the most stupid man in this town. You come home from the office at night, eat your supper, smoke, read your paper and go to bed; eat your breakfast in the morning and go to the office. You come home again at night, eat your supper, smoke, read your paper, go to bed; and so it goes day after day. I don't get a dozen words out of you, day in and day out, and you do not even want to listen to me, when I talk. If I want to go out anywhere in the evening, I have to go alone. You have always some excuse for staying at home. If I invite my friends here, you have usually some business that takes you out. My friends never see you with me, and hardly know I have a husband. "This sort of life may suit you, but it does not suit me. You have your business and other things to interest you during the day, I suppose, while I am shut up here in the house; and when you come home in the evening I want something else besides supper, smoke and Tribune. Now I intend to make a change." Here Mrs. Limkins deftly took the paper from Mr. Limkins, and rolling it up in her hands, proceeded to use it to point off her remarks.

Mr. Limkins yawned submissively, dumped the ashes from his cigar into the silver end tray, and settled himself as comfortably as possible to wait for the end. Mr. Limkins had heard these remarks many times before; he knew the story from beginning to end, and also knew it was useless to try to escape any part or defend himself in any way. Experience had taught him that it was best to sit quietly and take it—remaining silent to the end.

"Silas," continued Mrs. Limkins, shaking the crumpled Tribune at him viciously. "I have made up my mind not to stand this sort of thing any longer; all my friends take their husbands around with them and I have decided to bring you out."

Mr. Limkins said: "Oh," and grew nervous. Mrs. Limkins was evidently more determined than usual, and he began to fear that she had some sort of a scheme up her sleeve that would disturb his comfort.

"The Daughters of the Revolution and their husbands are going to have a banquet next week," said Mrs. Limkins. "There will be several toasts and I have arranged to have you respond to the toast 'Our Sons.'"

"Great Scott," exclaimed Mr. Limkins, waking up and staring helplessly at her.

"I will write out your speech," said Mrs. Limkins, paying no attention to his interruption; "all you will have to do will be to commit it to memory and repeat it at the banquet."

"No, by thunder," said Mr. Limkins, with considerable heat. "If I make a speech to your Daughters of the Revolution it will not be any woman's make-up, I can tell you. To begin with, I haven't time to monkey with any such nonsense; but if I did I would make my own speech—and I wouldn't have to write it out first, either. Do you think I can't make a speech? Why, I could make a speech that would knock out anything any of your Revolution Daughters' husbands could do—just off-hand—Jim Perkins, Lem Stubbins or any of the rest of them. Maybe, you think because there are a lot of stuck-up lawyers and professors in your set, that I can't trot in their class. Some day I'll fool you, Mrs. Limkins. And putting on his hat, Mr. Limkins blustered out of the house leaving Mrs. Limkins in doubt as to whether he would, or would not, carry out her plans.

This was just the sort of impression Mr. Limkins wanted to make on Mrs. Limkins, for from the very first mention of it, he was rather taken with the idea of making that speech but did not want to appear too willing. Mr. Limkins belonged to a class of men who go through life with an idea that they are born for better things. Everlastingly thinking that they could have shone in some other fellow's place if they had had the opportunity. Mentally sure that they have a natural talent for some calling of which they know absolutely nothing.

Mr. Limkins welcomed this opportunity as something he had always longed for; but he wanted Mrs. Limkins to think he was doing it under protest.

As Mr. Limkins strode along in the moonlight, he felt particularly satisfied with himself and he made up his mind that his speech should be a masterpiece. He would make Stubbins and Perkins turn green with envy. With that speech he would make a lasting reputation. Mrs. Limkins should know nothing about it in advance; he would make it a complete surprise to her. And then how proud she would be of him; and how much it would add to his advantage if he were.

He decided to tell Mrs. Limkins in the morning that he would make a speech just to please her, and as though it were a matter of no consequence to him. He would then spend the rest of his time before the banquet in arranging that speech, and fire it off as an entirely "extemporaneous" affair. The very thought of the glory awaiting him as the result had an exhilarating effect, and Mr. Limkins raised his chin in the air, clenched his fingers, and pranced along like a "three-year-old."

The next morning as Mr. Limkins was leaving the house for his office, he said to his wife as he patted her on the head in a fatherly way: "Now, little woman, if it will please you I will make a few remarks at your banquet."

"That's a dear, good boy," said Mrs. Limkins, "and you will let me write out something for you, won't you?" "No, little woman," he replied, "I can't come down to that, you know; but you shall not be ashamed of me." And Mr. Limkins went off, leaving Mrs. Limkins with some misgivings as to the final outcome of her plans. For when a woman has been the constant companion of a man for 11 years, she is very apt to have a fair idea of his mental capacity.

During the next few days Mr. Limkins devoted the greater part of his time to the preparation of his "extemporaneous" speech. It was a matter of so much importance to him that he even neglected his business to a considerable extent; and when the morning of the day of the banquet arrived, Mr. Limkins had written out and committed to memory a speech that he considered very high-class. However, he felt that he needed a little practice in delivery and determined to let his clerks go home early in the afternoon, in order to have the office all to himself for rehearsal. By three o'clock the last clerk had gone, and Mr. Limkins, after locking all the doors, began his recitation. However, he did not find this sort of practice at all satisfactory at first. The dead, bare walls of his office did not give back any encouragement, and he tried again and again some particular sentences, with the same unfavorable results. He felt that he could do better if he had some living thing to speak to—even if only a dog or a cat. He needed a living pair of eyes that he could fix with his eyes, in order to concentrate his attention and properly reach his climax.

Now, in the shuffle of the closing out of the world's fair, among other odds and ends that had been sold at auction, Mr. Limkins had come into possession of a small white donkey that had been used in the Streets of Cairo. Mr. Limkins made this purchase for Silas, Jr., and Silas, Jr., boy-like, had, for the first few weeks of his possession, enjoyed the donkey to the fullest extent; but the novelty had worn off. The donkey was now an old story, and was allowed to fall into a state of innocuous desuetude—so far as Silas, Jr., was concerned.

Silas, Jr., who had tired of riding and driving the donkey, now seldom thought of him, and when he did think of him it was usually during one of those fits of ennui—which boys will have—and on these occasions, Silas, Jr., had for some time past been in the habit of going into the barn, accompanied by a long sharp pointed stick, with which he would prod the donkey into giving a first-class exhibition in high kicking. This sort of thing had been going on long enough to give the donkey considerable practice and he had already attained a very high record for so small a donkey. Silas, Jr., had not, however, thought it necessary to take any note of his confidence regarding his late achievements with the donkey.

When Mr. Limkins felt the need of some living thing to inspire his eloquence, this living relic of the "Midway" very naturally came into his mind. He knew the donkey was at leisure, in the barn at home, and he at once decided the donkey should have the benefit of his rehearsal. A few minutes later Mr. Limkins entered his barn, closed and locked the doors behind him—and was alone with the donkey.

Mr. Limkins prefaced his remarks with a few kind soothing words to his donkeyship, and taking a position immediately in front of him, began his oration. The donkey was standing in the middle of the barn chewing some scraps of straw that were scattered about, and paid but little attention to his visitor at first; but as Mr. Limkins got well into his subject and began to throw in a Delsarte movement here and there, he raised his head and seemed to take considerable interest. He peered his long ears forward over his head in an inquiring way and eyed the speaker narrowly. This inquisitive attitude encouraged Mr. Limkins to still further effort and he became thoroughly warmed up.

The donkey laid back his left ear. Mr. Limkins was nearing his climax, the donkey was nearing his. Those gestures became more and more familiar and reminded him of other things. Mr. Limkins closed an eloquent period, shaking his fist right in the face of the donkey. Now, the donkey was of foreign birth, and could not be expected to appreciate an American speech anyhow—even under the most favorable circumstances.

He laid back the other ear; suddenly changed ends and landed fairly on Mr. Limkins' seat of utterance. Mr. Limkins sat down violently on a pile of old tomato cans and other rubbish in a remote corner of the barn, silently, but rapidly opening and shutting his mouth in a vain attempt to cry out; but for the moment he lacked the necessary amount of air pressure to the square inch to produce sound. When he had taken in a sufficient amount to proceed out loud, his next few remarks were made without notes, and were of an entirely personal nature; relating especially to the donkey and his donkey mothers for several generations back.

Mr. Limkins then proceeded to be very mean to the donkey and ended up by incensing him in a coil of clothesline, which he found in the barn. Around and around he wound the clothes-line until there was nothing of the donkey left visible but his head and ears. With the donkey in this helpless condition, Mr. Limkins took a fresh start at the beginning of his speech and recited it over and over again several times. Every time Mr. Limkins reached that particular climax, and made those magnificent gestures, there was a perceptible quiver in the bundle of clothes-line, which always caused a slight break at that particular part, in the otherwise easy flow of Mr. Limkins' speech.

At last Mr. Limkins felt that he could not improve by further practice, and, giving the bundle of clothes-line a parting kick, closed the interview. That night Mr. Limkins listened to the several speakers that preceded him, his heart swelled with pride as he thought how favorably his speech would compare with any that had been delivered. It may be that it is impossible to impress a man that is so thoroughly interested in himself as was Mr. Limkins; but be that as it may, Mr. Limkins failed to find anything worth noting. As he arose in his place to respond to "Our Sons," he felt confident that he would take his seat the hero of the evening.

A slight nervousness, together with some impatience to reach his most impressive periods, made him talk rapidly at first; and he also had some little difficulty in controlling his eyes, which showed a decided tendency towards a fixed stare. However, he managed to vary the stare to some extent, and continued to do fairly well until he reached that particular part which the donkey had pointed off so persistently. At this point Mr. Limkins made a slight pause and could not recall his next few lines—although he made a heroic effort to do so.

The picture of the donkey suddenly filled his mind to such an extent as to drive out everything else. For a moment it seemed impossible for him to get away from the scenes in the barn. One view after another swiftly chased each other through his mind. He wondered if anyone had found the donkey and set him free; or whether he was still embalmied in the clothes-line. He wondered who would be the one to find him—whether the cook, Silas, Jr., or one of the neighbors. He speculated on the chances of having been seen entering the barn in the afternoon, and what explanation he would make if questioned about it. He thought it would have been wiser to have restored the donkey his liberty before he left him. He could see the sad, lonesome look in his face as it protruded from the bundle of clothes-line; lying there through the long night on the cold floor of the barn.

All this was but a few lightning flashes through Mr. Limkins' mind, and he was vainly trying to fix his thoughts on his subject. From this point Mr. Limkins was obliged to proceed in a truly "extemporaneous" manner. He wandered on tremulously—sometimes on the track, sometimes off, and sometimes partly on and partly off. Occasionally he would get glimpses of his prepared speech; and when he did, he would eagerly fire them off—whether they fitted the place where they occurred to him, or not—sometimes getting things considerably mixed.

For instance, referring to Mr. Limkins' notes at one place, he should have said: "Who can tell how great our sons may be, or what grand thoughts the fathers of"—and Mr. Limkins, as he caught this on the fly, challenged the company with: "Who—who can tell whose son he may be, or who his father was?" Again, in another place, according to the notes that were stowed away in his inside pocket, he should have said: "Our forefathers, who for eight long years daily drank the bitter cup of want, that we might now be free—they never hoped for such development as this." And Mr. Limkins waylaid this as it went by, and waving his glass of wine before him, said: "Our forefathers, who for eight long years daily drank—on that bitter cup that is now so free—they never dreamed—of any anything like this."

All things must have an end; and when the marks of approval, which Mrs. Limkins had been administering from beneath the table, became too pointed to longer overlook, Mr. Limkins came to an end—abruptly.

Side by side Mr. and Mrs. Limkins silently walked to their home that night; and to Mr. Limkins there was an ominous sound in the steady, determined grinding of the snow and ice beneath Mrs. Limkins' feet. Occasionally he stole a humble glance in her direction, but found nothing in the steady, sober face to give him hope. Sadly he turned into his street; and as he still more sadly turned beneath an avenue of trees leading to his own door the moon came out in all her gentle glory; the stars looked down and through the leafless branches the light of heaven shone bright and merciful. The wretched man turned back with a last longing look at the free, beautiful world without, and then with head humbly bowed to meet the torrent of just wrath, which he knew was sure to fall upon him, he entered his cheerless home.

As the door was closing behind him a peculiar, mocking cry rang out on the clear, frosty air—that inimitable combination of sounds which only members of the donkey tribe can produce.

Does It Pay To Buy Cheap.
A cheap remedy for coughs and colds is all right, but you want something that will relieve and cure the more severe and dangerous results of throat and lung troubles. What shall you do? Go to a warmer and more regular climate? Yes if possible; if not possible for you, then in either case take the only remedy that has been introduced in all civilized countries with success in severe throat and lung troubles, "Boschee's German Syrup." It not only heals and stimulates the tissues to destroy the germ disease, but allays inflammation, causes easy expectoration, gives a good night's rest, and cures the patient. Try one bottle. Recommended many years by all druggists in the world. Sold by dealers in all civilized countries. Oct-27-1y

Blood Troubles: Cancer, Scrofula, Old Sores, Rheumatism, Contagious Blood Poison, Chronic Ulcers.

As the blood contains all the elements necessary to sustain life, it is important that it be kept free of all impurities, or it becomes a source of disease. Some poisons enter the blood from without, through the skin by absorption, or inoculation; others from within, as when waste products accumulate in the system and ferment, allowing disease germs to develop and be taken into the circulation. While all blood troubles have one common origin, each has some peculiarity to distinguish it from the other. Contagious Blood Poison, Scrofula, Cancer, Rheumatism, Eczema and other blood diseases can be distinguished by disease shows sooner or later on the outside and on the weakest part of the body, or where it finds the least resistance. Many mistake the sore or outward sign for the real disease, and attempt a cure by the use of salves, liniments and other external applications. Valuable time is lost and no permanent benefit derived from such treatment.

BLOOD TROUBLES REQUIRE BLOOD REMEDIES; the poison must be completely and permanently eradicated—the blood reinforced, purified and cleansed, or the disease goes deeper and saps the very life. Mercury, potash and arsenic, the treatment usually prescribed in this class of diseases, are violent poisons, even when taken in small doses—never cure, but do much harm by adding another poison to the already overburdened, diseased blood.

S. S. S., Nature's own remedy, made of roots and herbs, attacks the disease in the blood, antidotes and forces out all impurities, makes weak, thin blood rich, strong and healthy, and at the same time builds up the general health. S. S. S. is the only purely vegetable blood purifier known, and the only one that can reach deep-seated blood troubles. A record of 50 years of successful cures proves it to be a reliable, unfailing specific for all blood and skin troubles.

Free Medical Treatment.—Our Medical Department is in charge of skilled physicians, who have made blood and skin diseases a life study, so if you have Contagious Blood Poison, Cancer, Scrofula, Rheumatism, Eczema, an Old Sore or Ulcer, or any similar blood trouble, write them fully for advice about your case. All correspondence is conducted in strictest confidence. We make no charge for this service. Book on blood and skin diseases free.

Miss Fannie B. Hinds, of Mt. Sterling, is a missionary in the Orient. Her friends are very anxious about her.

Neglect is the short step so many take from a cough or cold to consumption. The early use of One Minute Cough Cure prevents consumption. It is the only harmless remedy that gives immediate results. It cures all throat and lung troubles. Children all like it and mothers endorse it. W. T. Brooks.

Died From Taking Prussic Acid through mistake. No worse mistake is than taking Blood Medicine for stomach trouble. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin cures all forms of indigestion, constipation or stomach trouble. Don't take the wrong kind of medicine, take Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Ask G. S. Varden, & Co., for it.

Wilmington, Ill., Sep. 21st, 1898.
W. B. Caldwell.
Dear sir:—I take great pleasure in adding my testimony as to the efficacy of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin as used in our home. We use it in all cases of Constipation and indigestion.
Respectfully, Eva J. Sweet, Nurse.

The Chinese ask 'how is your liver?' instead of 'how do you do?' for when the liver is active the health is good. DeWitt's Little Early Risers are famous little pills for the bowels. W. T. Brooks.

Question Answered

Yes August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers, and grandmothers, never thought of using anything else for indigestion or biliousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of Appendicitis, Nervous Prostration or Heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. Sold by dealers in all civilized countries. Oct-27-1y

To Asthma Sufferers.

Lawson Elvidge of Barrington, Ill., says he was cured of chronic asthma, of long standing by Pholey's Honey and Tar. It gives positive relief in all cases asthma, so this disease, when not completely cured, is rebuffed of all its terrors by this great remedy. Clarke & Kenney.

Starvation never yet cured dyspepsia. Persons with indigestion are already half starved. They need plenty of wholesome food. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat so that the body can be nourished while the worn out organs are being reconstructed. It is the only preparation known that will instantly relieve and completely cure all stomach troubles. Try it if you are suffering from indigestion. It will certainly do you good. W. T. Brooks.
